

Billy Pratt is an inspirational and transformational charity leader with a drive for excellence and inclusion that engages others in the pursuit of being better for the world.

His professional and volunteer experiences have been gained in the areas of international development, homelessness, community corrections, health and social services. Professionally, he serves as the CEO for Eden Care Communities, one of Saskatchewan's largest charities.

As a volunteer, he currently serves on the board of directors for the Jane Goodall Institute of Canada, the Kids Brain Health Network, the Kids Brain Health Foundation, LIFT Impact Partners, and is a member of the Public Advisory Committee for the Health Data Research Network of Canada. He is also a volunteer coach of the Not-for-Team that competes for the Hill School of Business at the University of Regina in the JDC West Competition. He has served on the boards of other local, provincial and national organizations over the years and was the Founding Race Director for the Queen City Marathon.

He has a Master's Degree in Leadership and was a Certified Fundraising Executive (CFRE) for 15 years.